"We have had all the police shakeups we want. The sooner police captains put their noses to the grindstone the better for all concerned. Shake-ups avail nothing. The captains soon get down to roots in their new precincts and tap the people with the same old regularity, winking at the flagrant abuses of the law when it pays them to do so.

"The closing of the Tenderloin houses of floe ast night by Capt. O'Connor simply shows that the police are beginning to appreciate the power of public sentiment as reflected by the press. The question with them now is how most wisely to crawl. They know that they cannot pull the wool over the eyes of all the people any longer and they propose to make a pretense of closing up the evil resorts.

"If a shake-up does occur, of course, every captain transferred will make a temporary show of what they cail cleaning up, and a few houses may be closed.
But what we want is a permanent cessution of this disreputable business, and we will have it. There is no such word as fail with us."

The stock market did not recover from the blow it received from the rumors that the Atchlson Company was involved in serious financial difficulties, and continued weak and feverish.

The volume of business, however, was comparatively small, and the bulis succeeded in sustaining prices for certain stocks against which there happen to be little or no outside pressure.

In regard to the Atchlson matter no definite information could be obtained. President Reinhart is in London, and George C. Magoun, Chairman of the Bourd of Directors, is ill at his horm.

In the absence of Mr. Magoun, no one at the office of Baring, Mascoun & Cowould say anything about the affairs of the Atchlson Company.

President Reinhart cabled from London late in the day that there was no justification for the unfavorable rumors.
